SECTION 1: GENERAL UNIVERSITY POLICIES

1-22 CHILDREN, BREASTFEEDING ON CAMPUS

When children are present, safety concerns and avoiding disruptions to regular classroom activities should always be averted. Caregivers of crying infants should provide the usual courtesy by caring for the infant outside the classroom. Environments posing a potential hazard to children, such as (but not limited to) science laboratories, should be avoided.

Breastfeeding is the recommended method of infant feeding because it is associated with scientifically documented health benefits for both mothers and infants. The University therefore supports the breastfeeding efforts of its students, faculty, and staff. Students, faculty, and staff are welcome to breastfeed their infants on the University campus. Mothers’ rooms are available in Twamley Hall, School of Medicine, Nursing, Northern Plains Behavioral Research Building, and EERC.

REVISION RECORD
August 1, 2012 - Published