7. Check with employers — A lot of businesses are willing to help pay employees to go back to school. Check with your supervisor to see what options are available. Many fast food restaurants and chain-retail stores offer scholarships to student employees.

8. Personal or family circumstances — Are you a first-generation college student? Do your parents make less than $25,000 a year? Is English your second language? If you have any of these characteristics, there is probably a scholarship out there waiting for you.

9. Watch the deadlines — Give yourself plenty of time to have everything completed and sent to the correct address. Remember neatness counts!

10. Identify the sponsors goals — Be sure to direct your application toward satisfying these goals.

11. Write an accomplished resume — Compile a list of all your accomplishments to help you identify your strengths. This will help you write a better resume.

12. Complete the application in full — Remember to follow directions. Your ability to submit a neat, timely, and complete application reflects on you.
SCHOLARSHIP TIPS

1. Talk to guidance counselors — Your high school or college guidance counselors often know of a variety of different scholarship awards available in your area. Local scholarships generally offer less competition than national scholarships. They are also aware of awards specific to your school.

2. Search the web — Many websites like www.fastweb.com, www.salliemae.com/plan-for-college/scholarships/scholarship-search/, and www.blackexcel.org/100minority.htm offer free scholarship searches. Many scholarships have odd or quirky requirements; be sure to check out all options.

3. Be involved — Be an active volunteer in the community. Many scholarships look for individuals who have a history of service. Groups such as the National Honor Society or Key Club look good on a scholarship resume. The groups themselves often offer scholarships to outstanding members. Participating in other extra-curricular activities such as writing for the student newspaper or playing a sport open many doors for scholarships.

4. Apply for scholarships from your college/major — Most college departments have different scholarships available for different majors. Check out your college website to find out if there are any scholarships for which you qualify for.

5. Work to keep up your grades — When it all comes down to it, colleges are much more likely to award scholarships based on GPA and ACT/SAT scores than anything else. Keeping up your grades in high school and later on in college is necessary to keep the money flowing into your account. Make homework a priority.

6. Make finding a scholarship a part-time job — Actively pursue scholarships, keeping a list of potential awards you qualify for and due dates. You should be willing to write scholarship essays and fill out a variety of different applications.

3. Allogan Slagle Memorial Scholarship
To provide financial assistance for college to Native American students in all fields of study whose tribe is non-federally recognized (students from state recognized tribes may apply).
