Describe admissions criteria and process to ensure preparation for graduate study:

The applicant must meet the School of Graduate Studies' current minimum general admission requirements as published in the graduate catalog.

- A four-year bachelor's degree from a recognized college or university.
- Twenty semester credits of coursework in the behavioral sciences at the undergraduate level, which must include theories of personality, abnormal psychology, developmental psychology, and statistics. Additional courses in psychology and sociology may be applied toward this prerequisite. Courses in other social science disciplines where the focus is on the description or explanation of individual or group behavior may be accepted in fulfillment of this prerequisite at the discretion of the department. Applicants must submit this information on the "Supplemental Application Form and Undergraduate Coursework Summary."

- A cumulative Grade Point Average (GPA) of at least 2.75 for all undergraduate work or a GPA of at least 3.0 for the junior and senior years of undergraduate work (based on A= 4.00).
- Three letters of recommendation that address your academic ability, professional accomplishments related to your field of study, and positive character traits.
- A statement of clear professional/educational goals that can be met by this program, program modality, and selected emphasis track area.
- Satisfy the School of Graduate Studies' English Language Proficiency requirements as published in the graduate catalog.
- International applicants need to refer to School of Graduate Studies' current minimum general admission requirements. All international applicants must contact the Counseling Program before applying to the Program.
- Interview. Applicants may be interviewed by members of the Counseling Admissions Committee in an online format in the event that additional information is needed to clarify their future goals, licensing and emphasis track intentions, application information, and modality of program format.
