Why Study COUNSELING PSYCHOLOGY at UND?

Join a program that values making a difference!

- A cohort-mentor model of admissions that brings diverse voices and perspectives into our community
- Social justice and cultural competence training infused throughout program activities
- Integrated behavioral healthcare and rural psychology training
- Research related to social justice and/or identity factors including, but not limited to, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, gender, ability, religion/spirituality, and social class

What You Will Gain

- Collaborations with a diverse group of doctoral students, 50% of whom identify as members of underrepresented and under-served communities
- Mentorship from nationally renowned faculty
- Skills to effectively address microaggressions and social inequities within our profession at every level
- Leadership and supervision experience to support your long-term career goals
- Telepsychology and evidence-based practice training uniquely relevant to work in rural settings

For More Information

- For Program Information and Requirements go to https://und.edu/programs/counseling-psychology-phd/index.html
  - Admissions Contact: Ms. Allyssa Baumbach (allyssa.baumbach@und.edu)
  - Training Co-Director: Dr. Kara Wettersten (kara.wettersten@und.edu)

- Funding Information for PhD students
  - Eligible for tuition waivers and assistantships throughout the program

Application deadline extended to:
DECEMBER 15th, 2019